Gena,

I am hoping to get in touch with a leader of the Haliwa-Saponi tribe. I emailed the addresses that are on the webpage you sent me, but I haven't heard back. Do you have any other contact info I could try?

Best,

Story,

You're very welcome. Not sure if you've already found this, but contact information for the leaders of NC Tribal Communities is on our website. As you may know, the proposed pipeline route traverses territory traditionally held by the Meherrin, Haliwa-Saponi, Coharie, and Lumbee tribes.

Gena,

Thanks so much for getting back to me. I am looking to write a piece on Virginia and North Carolina tribes' pushback against the ACP. Specifically, I'd love to hear how the fight against the ACP is uniting East Coast tribes, and what they have learned from Western tribes' fight against the Dakota Access pipeline.

If possible, I would love to come down to North Carolina one day this week and speak with tribe leaders. I want to write a story that shares their perspective, thoughts, and struggles.

I look forward to hearing from you!

Best,

Hello,

My name is Story Hinckley and I am a reporter with the Christian Science Monitor in Boston (although I am originally from Virginia!). I am interested in writing a piece on Native Americans' pushback against the Atlantic Coast Pipeline in North Carolina.

Is anyone available to speak with me for 10-15 minutes today on background?

I'd love to hear from you!

Best,

Story
